

©James Elliott

Quilt name: "Harvesting a Dream"
(Pictorial expressions on fabric of P Buckley Moss Museum in Waynesboro, Virginia)
Quilt designed and created by Camelia Elliott in 2007.

Note to Pat: On this quilt, Grandpa Buckley is rocking on the porch of your museum. I know he had a profound influence on your life and you have fond memories of him sitting in his brown rocker in the bay window waiting for you to return from school. His great faith in you, patience in listening to everything you had to say, and teaching you, "if you want to do something and try your hardest, you will succeed" helped mold you into the person you are today.

On the lawn, you are painting the museum-symbolic of things to come (the opening of your museum on May 12, 1989 and being named "The People's Artist" by Charles Kuralt on the CBS Sunday Morning Show in 1989).